At the beginning of the method, a tool

is launched which writes an xml-file. Then, this xml-file is read by the web-service. The problem is: During the launch of the tool, a console window appears with the information that it is launched. I do not need this console window! The launched tool and the web service should run as a windows application. I found this question (How do I launch a program/script from within a batch file?), but this solution did not work on my side. Any ideas on how to solve this problem? Best, Luc A: I found a way. In the batch file, you can start the programm via the &-Syntax. The objective of this proposal is to define the role of intermediate uveal melanocytes in the synthesis and secretion of melanin and to investigate further the role of melanin in mammalian ocular pigment cells. Recent studies from our laboratory have identified a new fusiform melanocyte residing in the human uvea. Its appearance in ocular tissues has not been previously reported. These cells exhibit a highly organized array of melanosomes that is reminiscent of the melanocytes of the skin. In the current proposal e24f408de9
