5KPlayer is a free to try multimedia player for Windows that can play video files of different formats; it also lets you download online contents such as videos from YouTube, Facebook and Twitter. 5KPlayer Lately, the popularity of the Macbook Air – a small, light notebook with a sleek and stylish design – has skyrocketed. Let's face it: It's no secret that Apple has designed the world's best laptops. The company is serious about this, and it makes perfect sense that they want to expand their laptop lineup to accommodate the growing demand for ultracompact notebooks. The laptop that they chose to expand to fill this niche is the Macbook Air. Let's take a look at everything you can expect from the Macbook Air once it launches on October 17. Designed with the consumer in mind Apple knows that the most important factor for notebook buyers is price. The Macbook Air will be the cheapest 13-inch laptop that's ever been made, coming in at a base price of just $999. And for what you get, that's an excellent value in our book. The Macbook Air will be fully equipped with Intel's latest Haswell CPU – a 7th generation processor that Apple claims will be twice as fast as previous-generation models. The new model will be equipped with a 1.8GHz Core i5 processor and 4GB of RAM. In the United States, the notebook will be available in three different configurations. The base model is available at $999, and will come equipped with a 128GB SSD storage drive and 4GB of RAM. The two more expensive models are priced at $1,199 and $1,599 respectively, with 8GB of RAM and a 256GB SSD. In other regions, the Macbook Air will feature two processor options, with a cheaper configuration available in the US and Asia, while the "13-inch MacBook Air with Retina display" will be available in Europe and Australia. The notebook will also come with a 1366 x 768 screen resolution, and the display will be an IPS (in-plane switching) LCD with matte anti-glare coating. If you want a pretty darned thin Macbook Air, you'll be happy to know that this model will have a thickness of just 12mm, and weigh just 2.06 pounds. This makes it the slimmest, lightest Macbook Air to date. (The MacBook Air before it had an 11.3mm-thin chassis
