In Latin America, the number of hepatitis C virus (HCV)-infected individuals is the highest in the world. HIV seroprevalence is also high, with some countries reporting the occurrence of HIV-HCV coinfection. The present systematic review summarizes the available evidence on this coinfection and the factors associated with HCV seroprevalence, treatment uptake, and adverse effects of HCV treatment among HIV-infected individuals. A review of the databases Medline, Embase, and Lilacs was performed. The prevalence of HCV among HIV-infected individuals was calculated, and the risk factors associated with treatment uptake and adverse events were summarized. There are few studies on this topic and from a limited number of countries. The few studies available are mostly of low quality. Few data are available from Central America and the Caribbean. Overall, the estimated prevalence of HCV infection among people living with HIV was 19.7%, with no difference between men (20%) and women (19.4%) and across age groups (20%-22%). Risk factors for HCV infection were intravenous drug use (odds ratio [OR] 2.7), male sex (OR 3.2), and age (

Actual File Folders Description:Immune cytoprotection in transgenic rats expressing large quantities of H-2d cytokine genes. H-2d cytokine genes have been shown to mediate potent nonspecific cytoprotection in vivo. To investigate the role of cytokine production in immune cytoprotection, we constructed two lines of transgenic rats expressing genes for interleukin-2 (IL-2), IL-4, interferon-gamma (IFN-gamma), or granulocyte-macrophage colony-stimulating factor (GM-CSF) under the control of the metallothionein promoter. One line, designated TCR-IFN-gamma rats, expressed IL-2. The second line, designated TCR-GM-CSF rats, expressed GM-CSF and a truncated form of IL-4. All transgenic rats expressed the cytokine in various organs at levels comparable to endogenous cytokines. TCR-IFN-gamma rats were deficient in IL-2 and had significantly enhanced IL-4 and IL-12 levels. In addition, these rats were hyperresponsive to tumor necrosis factor. TCR-IFN-gamma rats were more resistant to D-galactosamine-induced liver injury than control rats. In contrast, TCR-GM-CSF rats were more resistant to tumor necrosis factor and were deficient in IL-12 production. Heterologous (self) and self-restricted (systemic) T-cell responses were unimpaired in these animals. These results demonstrate that the level of immune cytoprotection can be altered by the production of cytokines alone. Furthermore, the expression of various cytokines within the same animal can have opposite effects on host responses.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a propeller unit, an outboard motor, and a method for producing a propeller unit. 2. Description of the Related Art A watercraft is propelled by a propeller unit of an outboard motor that is mounted on the stern of the watercraft. Such outboard motors are disclosed in Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open Publication No. 2002-218522 and Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open Publication No. H5-216031. As disclosed in these publications, an outboard motor is provided with a propeller unit that includes a duct having an end portion near the propeller unit,
