How to Use Photoshop Image Editing There are four main ways to use Photoshop: Create images The most common way to use Photoshop is to create images. In that case, you use the Pen tool to draw shapes, then use the Move tool to place the shape you drew on an area on the layers panel. You can then use the Eraser tool to erase areas you no longer want and the Fill tool to fill in areas you do want. After adding layers to your image, you can set the type of layer, the effect of the layer, and its blending mode. Cutting images The Cut tool lets you cut out part of an image or use it as a background. The tool is also used to combine multiple images into a single image. Drawing with a Path You can use the Pen tool to draw paths around shapes or text you've already drawn. Use the Fill tool to fill in the path, and the Stroke tool to add outlines to the path. Text You can use the Text tool to insert text into an image, change its font, size, and other attributes. You can also use tools such as Free Transform and Polygonal Lasso to edit text. Using Presets A preset lets you choose any option in the toolbox. With the Text tool, you can pick a font, size, and number of characters. With Free Transform, you can resize your image. With the Paint Bucket tool, you can fill the color of the image. Creating Images Setting up the canvas First, you'll need to create a new Photoshop document. On the Windows desktop, start up Photoshop by selecting the Start menu, selecting Photoshop on the menu, and then selecting the Photoshop icon. After Photoshop is open, select File > New. In the New Photoshop Document dialog box that appears, set the size and location of the image. For example, you can set the image size to be 800 by 600 pixels. You'll need to use the Help file to find out how to change the units of your image size. The units that are listed in the dialog box are pixels, picas, and centimeters. You can also use the Help file to find out how to create a new image in a new Photoshop document. The New Photoshop Document dialog box has a white background. You can click outside the dialog box to return to your Photoshop document

What's New In?

Texas Border Sheriff Won't Recruit In a news interview recently, the El Paso County Sheriff said that he will not recruit any volunteer deputies for his county. Those who have been asking about his position with regard to the immigration issue, well, this sounds like a no-brainer. Sheriff Richard Wiles has been a vocal critic of the Obama Administration's immigration policies and a supporter of Arizona's SB1070 law. In a recent county commission meeting, the sheriff was asked if he had received any pressure to not recruit anymore deputies. He responded that he has not. "I have not been pressured at all," he said. Another powerful sheriff's office in the U.S., along the southern border, has bucked the trend of placing a big emphasis on guarding the border and cracking down on illegal immigration. The Border Patrol and Customs and Border Protection are huge federal law enforcement agencies and it wouldn't make sense for Texas sheriffs to recruit deputies at a federal level. The sheriff's office in Hidalgo County recruits deputies from the 14 counties that make up the county. Hidalgo County has about 50,000 residents according to H-Town USA. It would be a significant loss for the sheriff's department. "If you want to guard the border, then you have to have government border guards," Paul Gomez of the Hidalgo County Sheriff's Department told the Herald. "You don't need volunteer sheriffs and constables." Gomez said that President Obama's policies have created a hostile environment for working with the county's sheriffs, especially in the border counties. A reporter pointed out that Hidalgo County was a hotbed of illegal immigration during the Obama Administration's supposedly "deportation-friendly" policies. "They (Obama officials) have engaged in a political agenda and a political deception that has been purposely designed to create a hostile environment to deal with. They didn't do that on purpose, but that's the effect. People hate them," Gomez said. Gomez expressed frustration that most of the county's deputies and sheriff's office staff are veterans who have been in law enforcement for decades. A reporter asked Gomez if the Hidalgo County sheriff's
