EasyHelp can be used to create a printable manual to your own Windows software. The main advantage of using EasyHelp is that it can generate a printable manual from your own help file. EasyHelp is a command line interface application. The User must have knowledge of a command line and use of MS DOS and Windows. EasyHelp may work with only the default Windows Help files. EasyHelp cannot create updates to a existing file. EasyHelp supports the following type of help files: ☐ Web Help ☐ PDF Help ☐ RTF Help ☐ Local Help ☐ MS Word 2007 Help (V1 only) How to Use EasyHelp: 1) Install EasyHelp You can download the latest version of EasyHelp from 2) Create a Local Help File Creating a local help file using EasyHelp is simple, just select the Make a Help File option in the Help File Properties box in the Help Options dialog. Then, open the file, you just created, using Microsoft Word. The Make a Help File option is located in the Local Help Window Properties box in the Help Options dialog. 3) Create a Web Help File For creating a web help file using EasyHelp is more complex than creating a local help file. Although it is possible to create a web help file using EasyHelp, the easiest way is to use the MS Help Viewer. When you first load the MS Help Viewer, it will display information about the help files on your hard drive. Start the MS Help Viewer by double clicking on the "H" Icon. Select Help and navigate to the folder that contains the help file. Drag and drop the file into the MS Help Viewer. For more information about using the MS Help Viewer, see help in microsoft.com. 4) Create an RTF Help File Using EasyHelp for creating an RTF Help file is a bit more complicated than the previous two tasks. First, you must install the free help maker publisher from Next, you will need to run the rtf/help maker.bat file. This will set the version of Windows and the size of help file.
