"Stunning intensity, postmodern design, and a near-perfect economy mechanic combine for an end-to-end intense experience. For a free-to-play game with no monthly fees, the economy is balanced and explorative, and really makes the game's many micro-transactions meaningful. The possibilities are endless." - PC GamerAn outstanding, beautiful RTS... is probably the closest you will get to being high on meth.PC GamesNova et al (2010), PC Gamer "Dropzone Evolution is a very solid free-to-play RTS that manages to achieve an impressive degree of balance, making it a more affordable alternative to other more famous RTS games such as League of Legends and Dota 2." - Nova et al ReviewsMade for fun "Dropzone Evolution offers a more relaxing, less time-consuming, competitive arena where players choose from a single race and compete over a full game with strategic decisions that impact how the match plays out." - Amazing Arcade Out of the box, the game is focused on delivering solid gameplay instead of being purely focused on the monetisation aspect. The former is a win in my book, because if a game comes out and it's just about monetisation, that's bad. Of course, if a game is all about monetisation it's fine, but if a game is focused on gameplay, then that's awesome. Gameplay and Controls The gameplay is straightforward. You choose a race and play (nope, there aren't any pre-determined matches either), you place your units on the map and you click on the enemy army to attack. There's actually quite a lot of choices you can make, by tweaking your army's general settings and then by using some pre-defined features. For instance, you can choose to launch a special attack every X turns (16 in the beta), you can have your units build better with X minerals mined and so on. Game Modes There are game modes in the beta, but I haven't really had the time yet to analyse them in detail. The game modes are the following: 1. Tutorial / Practice Mode 2. Options Mode 3. Single Race 4. Free For All 5. Co-op (tournament style) 6. Free To Play Ranked Matchplay The tutorial/practice mode is just that, a tutorial for the gameplay and to help you become familiar with everything. I suppose it's

What's new:

Apex Construct is a metroidvania platform video game developed and published by indie studio Aberrant. The game was released for Microsoft Windows, PlayStation 4, Xbox One and Nintendo Switch on 5 November 2016. In the game, the player controls the speed of projectiles fired by a hovering player-character known as the "operator". It was produced by veteran developer Jason Roberts. Plot On an isolated planet called Daemon, a white-robed and flamboyant main character known as the "operator" is hunting down a possessed, sword-wielding woman known as the "castellan". The operator is on a diabolical mission that will require him to rescue the castellan. Gameplay Players control the speed of projectiles as they are fired from the ground. Due to this, the movement and momentum of the player character is affected. Upon reaching certain speeds players can ride others such as Energy beams or Gravity Well forces. Refuse, explode and fry enemy projectiles to reveal their lasers. Energy beams can be used to travel long distances and chain together to destroy obstacles, gravity wells can be used as "tanks" to trap enemies and make them explode. When both enemies are dead, players can upgrade their weapon with a variety of different upgrades to destroy them more quickly or with stronger effects. At the end of each stage, a final weapon called "the rad gater" is unlocked to make sure no enemy is left alive. The default weapons can be found by breaking red blocks and blue blocks. They can be upgraded once for example by breaking an energy beam weapon and then by breaking another one of a different type. Story Incorporating several elements of the classic 80's metroidvania gameplay, Apex Construct parodies the predatory crows which appear in many of the older games, and features the operator as the hero of a new era of crows, one who dare free the animal in their natural environment and go on quests, while keeping to the shadows. The game centers around the Operator, a self-proclaimed "Archivist" who exists in the world of Apex Construct. Before the events of the story, the Operator was an archaeologist of immense power known as the "Archivist", who for reasons unknown, places himself into the future in both body and mind, a futurist archetype akin to Shmup maker game composer Satoshi Sakamoto. The Operator begins on a quest to save a woman called The Castellan whose mind has been

After being called to leave her humble village, the young and foolish monk sets out in the hands of her faithful parents, on a journey to the land of Ashenvale, where the nothingness has been invaded by a war-like army. As a traveler with little in the way of skills or powers, she must put her newfound focus on the remaining skills she has. Exercising the power of perception, she can learn the location of hidden objects by a simple exchange of sight. A bit of a romantic, she can use an amorous outlook to persuade men and women to reveal tidbits of information. But her most prized skill is one that runs entirely counter to her perception; that is, the ability to give life. Able to create small lifeforms out of the nothingness, the monk is able to restore the world, and bring life back into the land. [WHY WE WOULD LIKE TO MAKE A GAME] "It was a game that forced itself into our heads, and we would be doing something bad if we couldn't think of anything else." We are three young people with a lot of life experience between us. We have worked in a variety of different roles over the years, and we don't like to do those things that other people make us do. While not so much an ambition as a need to take care of ourselves, we wanted to make a game that let us express what we would like to do, but what is impossible or unavailable. With our expertise, and from years of experience, we have learned a lot about what the industry requires, and what kinds of games they like. We are aware of a trend in the business, where the complex and atypical content in games is becoming a rarer and rarer occurrence. Games that challenge yourself, and the player's ability to control the pace and progression are needed, but those games are becoming increasingly rare. Unfortunately, we often feel like we have to make the wrong decision, and end up making games that we don't care about. This is why we'd like to make games that we are passionate about, games that let us explore our ideas. What we're proposing with this game is something we feel is in that sweet spot of too hard to be accessible, while still presenting challenge to the player. We hope you'll like the challenge that we have created, and feel free to leave comments or questions! Playable On: - PC - Mac, Linux - Stadia - Playstation
