Genetic studies of hereditary progressive lymphedema (HPL) have indicated a strong association with chromosome 6. In this study, we analyzed a chromosome 6q-derived cosmid library constructed from an HPL-affected dog. We localized at least 15 genetic loci within a 5 cM region of the dog chromosome 6 that was linked to HPL. One region, which we designated HPL-H, mapped between the microsatellite marker D6S85 and D6S100. Seven microsatellites were selected from this region for further mapping analysis. Marker haplotypes were generated from HPL-affected and unaffected dogs in five pedigrees. In two HPL-affected dogs, five different haplotypes could be assigned for the seven loci, indicating an origin of the disease in the same dog. The following haplotype was identified in a pedigree in which both HPL-affected dogs were carriers of the same haplotype: D6S100, D6S108, D6S791, D6S944, and D6S981. Mapping of a functional gene related to HPL within this interval is now underway.Bianca Nucci is a 19-year-old Connecticut girl, who walked a mile to school every day. Bianca never let any stranger into her life. She found out that there was a secret world of exploitation and fraud at age 10. She was sick of being used. Bianca and many other victims of child sex abuse are being exploited by a group of teenagers who roam the city of Boston. They have been preying on unsuspecting kids, using social media and the internet to get them to do all sorts of things. One of these kids is accused of raping a 16-
