Just how bad are the Republicans' internal divisions? They're so bad that House Speaker John Boehner says he no longer will fight the battle. Speaking at a gathering of the conservative American Enterprise Institute, Boehner said "I'm probably through being the Speaker of the House." Because so much of what Boehner claims to stand for -- tax reform, conservative judges -- seems to have to do with making sure conservatives remain in their place in the GOP hierarchy, this is a moment for the GOP to get really, really serious about fundamental reform. And for the most part, Republicans seem genuinely bewildered that their own party is so weak and squishy. It's a party that's the only one in America that thinks it can tax the rich and raise taxes on the middle class and get away with it. And
