turned into a Silverlight app by just copying the control files. I'm using a Session ID for authentication, and the issue I'm running into is that the app in Silverlight always immediately shows that I'm not authenticated in the web.config like it would in the plain WebForms app. In plain WebForms, however, the app reads the web.config (which has the same authentication settings), and it shows the user login when they're not logged in. In Silverlight, even when a user isn't logged in, it shows that the user is logged in (though not the username). Here's what the Web.config looks like in plain WebForms: And here's the web.config for the Silverlight app:
