Kimura disease in a Chinese family. Kimura disease is an idiopathic systemic disorder of unknown etiology, characterized by an enlargement of the lymph nodes, especially of the posterior mediastinum and paravertebral region and by the presence of reactive lymphoid hyperplasia. The prognosis is favorable with no further recurrence. The author describes a case of Kimura disease, with onset in an 11-year-old boy from his family, with a review of the literature.

Little Sir Francis is a patty-style patty from Belly Ballot Bakery that I used to enjoy as a kid. It has become nostalgic for me as I have watched my sister and her family grow up and gain their own taste in food. I'm so very happy to have found the recipe for these patties here. It's easy to make the little bite-sized bites by doubling the recipe in a 9-inch square baking dish. You can make these patties, reheat them in the oven, or serve them fresh out of the oven. There are more ideas for use on your little bites in the Cooking Light recipe.

Coating the Stovetop Patties First, melt the butter in a medium skillet over medium-low heat. Add the rolled oats, stirring often, until the oats are coated. Add the brown sugar, pecans, cinnamon, and baking soda. Stir until evenly coated with the butter and sugar. Place the pie dough in the middle of a large piece of parchment paper. Lightly spray the top and bottom of the dough with cooking spray. Using your hands, press the dough down into a 10 x 15 inch rectangle, pressing the edges together. Roll the dough into a log shape, keeping the ends of the dough sticking out. Lay the log on a baking sheet and place in the freezer for 10 to 15 minutes. To make the patties, roll out the dough log into 1/4-inch-thick rounds. Place a 1 1/4-inch-thick round on top of each other and, using the tines of a fork, cut the rounds into 1-inch squares. Bake for 8 to 10 minutes or until they are browned on the edges.
