[Sanitary and hygienic aspects of the design of open-air facilities and premises for sport and culture]. The paper deals with the problems of the design and construction of open-air spaces, recreational facilities, as well as cemeteries and cultural centers. A scientific attitude to the solution of the problems related to these areas is required in accordance with the sanitary and hygienic requirements. An integral approach and approach to various aspects of design and construction should be taken into account when determining all the required work. Epstein-Barr virus status and prognosis in patients with small cell and oat cell lung cancer treated with cisplatin/etoposide. We determined the prevalence of Epstein-Barr virus (EBV) status in patients with small cell and oat cell lung cancer and whether it correlated with the response to cisplatin/etoposide and survival. Paraffin-embedded tissue samples were obtained from 30 untreated patients with small cell and oat cell lung cancer. In situ hybridization to detect the EBV-encoded RNA was performed on 4-microm tissue sections. EBV was detected in the tumor cells of 20 (67%) patients. In 35% of patients with small cell cancer and in 30% of patients with oat cell cancer, the 648931e174
