It is unsurprising that the tumour or its adjacent tissues were sampled in all patients. Although every attempt was made to avoid any potential contamination by tumour cells, we cannot entirely rule out the possibility that some of the included sites contained tumour cells. In this study, most of the patients who completed the completion therapy and the assessed long-term quality of life were positive for CD24 and CD44; only few demonstrated D2-40 positivity. Zhang *et al* [25] reported that D2-40 was expressed in 100% of patients with HPS and that it was correlated with TNM stage. The reason for this discrepancy is uncertain. The previous study did not specify the antibodies used for staining, and the authors did not discuss the concordance between D2-40 and other markers of lymphangiogenesis or lymph node metastasis. The number of cases included in our study was small, but the expression levels of D2-40 in tumour cells in LN metastasis cases were higher than that in patients without LN metastasis. We believe that this result indicated that expression levels of D2-40 is relatively high in tumour cells in LN metastasis cases, and the concordance between D2-40 and other markers of lymphangiogenesis was a meaningful outcome to further confirm.
