The New FastReport.Q: How to add a Ruby gem without installing it in ruby? I have a gem, which I have uploaded to rubygems.org. But I am unable to use the gem in a workbench of Rails without installing it. I have bundle install and bundle exec rails g gem_name:install but the gem is not being installed. Is there some other command, I am missing? A: You can use the gem itself to install it directly. It's called gem install --local path/to/gem. From the gem documentation: gem install --local path/to/gem This invention relates to a method and an apparatus for operating a charging contact of a corona charging device in which a charging wire is guided through a housing, an air gap is formed between the charging wire and an insulator that contains the charging wire, and an electrical charging field is produced in the air gap. German Patent Disclosure DE-OS No. 33 17 512 discloses a corona charging device with an insulator carrying a charging wire, in which the charging wire is slidably mounted within a dielectric housing. The corona charging device has a contact portion for charging at which a contact pressure is maintained between the charging wire and a contact plate secured to the housing. A secondary air gap must be maintained between the charging wire and the housing at this contact point. Therefore, the contact plate has an opening through which the charging wire passes and which is surrounded by a horn that is designed as a metallic sheet and electrically insulated from the contact plate. The front edge of this horn is shaped so that a secondary air gap is formed between the horn and the charging wire. The contact portion of the charging device permits contacts to be pressed against a surface that is to be charged. In that case, the
