So much so that when we moved to New York a month ago I was still traumatized by the breakup. I didn't realize how much it had affected me and I still hadn't been in a relationship since but guess what?... I'm over it now and just going to live my life in a whole new way. So much for that. Well, I'm still single and that's alright by me. I'll be dealing with the trauma of broken heart without the emotional pull of a relationship. I did everything to get hurt – and then I got to realize that he wasn't the one for me. And I even cried the entire time I was driving. I wouldn't want to remember that. I mean, really, really sad. This is the last we'll be seeing of the Brooklynettes as a group. While we did get to see Gabby get married, it was for a television show. The series seems to be over, as well as most of the cast. I'm not surprised at all that they would rather move on from that whole debacle. I know I'm just going to miss these girls, no matter what and I'm not happy about it. I thought I was happy before the series started but I guess I'll have to think again. But I'm in good company. Many people do feel that way. And in a way I'm glad. I'm glad because the Brooklynettes were such a good show for me to watch. Since I come from a very small town, I was able to see these girls living their everyday lives and figuring out how to create a career out of their passion and about what really matters to them. I got to see girls that I'd never seen before: girls with no political experience, girls c6a93da74d
