PRIMECELLULARÂ .BOSTON (Reuters) - A former private equity fund executive and film producer has withdrawn from consideration to lead the U.S. military's Africa Command, according to a U.S. media report on Friday. The director of the U.S. Department of Defense's Africa Command, Vice Admiral Charles Lovett, talks to media after the United Nations Security Council approved a resolution to provide more support to U.N. peacekeeping efforts in South Sudan during a news conference in New York, U.S., February 13, 2016.

REUTERS/Brendan McDermid U.S. President-elect Donald Trump's transition office confirmed the retirement of Lieutenant General Kenneth McKenzie, a four-star general, from the post. The retired army general has been the top military officer in Africa Command, which oversees U.S. military activity in Africa and the Middle East, since 2014. According to the New York Times, McKenzie has had long-standing ties with Steven Mnuchin, who will become the new U.S. Treasury secretary after Trump assumes office in January. "An offer has been withdrawn from Lt. Gen. McKenzie for appointment to be commandant of the Marine Corps as Director, Headquarters Marine Corps," a Marine Corps spokesman told Reuters. "The transition team will not be making any further statements on this matter." The chairman of an African advocacy group asked the Pentagon on Friday to explain why President Barack Obama had failed to recommend a more aggressive response to the violence in the Central African Republic, where the death toll is still rising. “The situation for the civilians continues to worsen. This is a humanitarian crisis, not a civil war,” said C.J. Chivers, president of Protect Rights Now in Washington, in a statement. Earlier on Friday, Marine Major General Vincent Brooks, deputy commander of the Africa Command, told reporters he had begun reviewing military options for the violence in CAR. Bro c6a93da74d
