It seems to disappear when there's no activity in a while. I guess it doesn't disappear when enough users have never signed up, so the same users are re-prompted to sign up for a different proposal. This could be made explicit to users if there are a few proposals on which there's never activity. A: There are several meta sites - most are less active than some of the more active SO sites - and since they don't follow the same criteria as the rest of the sites, that means that you don't get a vote or flag count for them. You don't get any reputation from the sites, so we don't need to worry about that. If we had some activity on those sites, you would be given the ability to vote there just like on any other site. Lectures Group of demonstrators against the reduction of the minimum retirement age. The first objective of the exhibition was to provide the viewer with the opportunity to develop a critical attitude towards the social, political and economic system. The exhibition material includes documentary, photo and video footage of the demonstrations and press conferences. Another objective was to provide space for journalists to record, film and comment on the diverse roles they play in public and private life. This was achieved by placing the exhibition in the offices of the journalists' association and the Süddeutsche Zeitung newspaper, both of which sent personnel to the site to assist with the project. The exhibition was supported by the newspaper Die Zeit and the journalists' association. In addition, at each venue a debate was held with journalists, journalists' representatives and students, in which viewpoints were represented on the theme of the exhibition.Q: Find all primes p such that 2edc1e01e8
