Genetic variations in the TGF-beta1 gene and risk of type 2 diabetes mellitus in a Chinese population. To examine the association between three single nucleotide polymorphisms (SNPs) in the transforming growth factor-beta1 (TGF-beta1) gene and type 2 diabetes mellitus (T2DM) in a Chinese population. Three SNPs of the TGF-beta1 gene (C-509T, G-800A and T869C) were analyzed by polymerase chain reaction-restriction fragment length polymorphism (PCR-RFLP) in 454 T2DM patients and 516 healthy control subjects. The chi2 test was used to examine the differences between patients and controls in the genotype frequencies. Odds ratio (OR) with 95% confidence interval (CI) was used to estimate the risk of T2DM with adjusted confounding factors. No significant association was found between these SNPs and T2DM in the overall population. However, stratified analyses by gender revealed that the C-509T polymorphism was associated with T2DM in men [TT vs. CC, adjusted OR = 0.69, 95% CI = 0.47-1.00; CT vs. CC, adjusted OR = 0.65, 95% CI = 0.45-0.94]. The C-509T polymorphism may affect the susceptibility to T2DM in men but not in the overall population. No association was found between the other two SNPs and T2DM. Further studies should be performed to clarify the association between the TGF-beta1 gene and T2DM in a larger sample.

The fatal shooting of a 28-year-old man by Santa Clara police this week was deemed justifiable, according to the Santa Clara County District Attorney's Office. Kai Carisa was shot and killed at his home in the 1500 block of El Camino Real by police who said they were responding to a 911 call reporting a burglary in progress, according to the DA's office. The DA's Office said the officers' use of force was "lawful and necessary" and that the shooting was justified. Carisa was found by police inside the home suffering from a gunshot wound to the neck. The gunshot wound, which investigators described as non-life threatening, was found on the exterior of the home, according to investigators. Carisa was a suspect in an earlier burglary and was not under arrest at the time he was shot, according to the DA's Office. Santa Clara police said in a statement that Carisa was taken to a local hospital and treated for his wound before being taken into custody. Officers said that once they determined the victim was deceased, they immediately began attempting life-saving measures and contacting paramedics. The investigation into Carisa's shooting was conducted by the Santa Clara Police Department's Homicide Unit and the Santa Clara County District Attorney's Office. Other officers at the scene were reportedly out of radio range and did not immediately learn that Carisa had been fatally shot. "Santa Clara police officers are trained to move to the scene of an emergency and provide immediate assistance to anyone in need of assistance," the statement from the Santa Clara Police Department read. "Unfortunately, once emergency services arrived at the scene, their radio communication was disrupted. Because of this, officers were unaware that the incident involved a subject who had been shot and were unable to provide emergency services to the victim." Police
