Portland lawyer who was struck and killed by a vehicle last fall while standing on a highway shoulder had, in the days leading up to his death, expressed concern about his desire to kill himself, according to his fiancée. Michael D. Donahue of Portland, who killed himself in a Yarmouth parking lot on October 20 while “seeing his life flash before his eyes,” was distraught over his situation, expecting to see the government shut down and an upcoming election that was shaping up to be very close, Laura Drake of Yarmouth said Friday. Donahue was a 28-year veteran of the U.S. attorney’s office, according to the Portland Press Herald. Donahue’s family said on Saturday that the jury at his inquest found that he “committed suicide while having no reasonable prospect of avoiding or significantly ameliorating his situation.” The inquest jury on Friday also found that Donahue’s death was a “justifiable homicide.” Drake said her fiancée, who suffered from bipolar disorder, was deeply concerned about the direction of the country and about the constitutionality of the Affordable Care Act, also known as Obamacare. “He feared the country was careening out of control,” Drake said in a telephone interview. She said her fiancée told her he was afraid the United States could be heading into a civil war. “It was a time when you could feel the temperature rising,” Drake said. She said he told her he didn’t feel safe with that f988f36e3a
