The present invention relates to the field of pharmaceutical compositions. Specifically, these compounds contain an active ingredient encapsulated within a liposome or other suitable matrix. Many pharmaceutical formulations, such as liposomes, are known in the art. Liposomes are microscopic, generally spherical, dispersed entities composed of amphipathic molecules and generally have a diameter of from 30 nm to 5,000 nm. These liposomes are useful as vehicles for delivering pharmacologically active agents, including both macromolecules and small molecules, to a living host. Liposomes are a biocompatible vehicle for delivering active agents to a living host. In general, most liposomes currently available for pharmaceutical use are used to deliver pharmaceutically active materials to the circulatory system
