Another option is FPDF. It's an HTML to PDF converter, very handy for professional HTML to PDF conversions. It can also read and manipulate PDFs. A: Finally, found it. Not what I want, but still a good enough solution. I found this tutorial for getting the PDF to HTML or PDF to HTML online: But you need to use the "Embed" button on the page, which you don't get in the Chrome Reader app, and even with the tutorial, you need to install the software to use the option. The new file it creates from the "Embed" button is a "zip" file, and they make a CSV file for you if you need the raw data. The tutorial also uses "wkhtmlto", but you might be able to do this with just FPDF, I have yet to figure that out, but not tested. The present invention relates to a new and distinct cultivar of Kalanchoe plant, botanically known as Kalanchoe blossfeldiana, and hereinafter referred to by the name 'K11232'. The new Kalanchoe is a product of a planned breeding program conducted by the Inventor in Aalsmeer, The Netherlands. The objective of the breeding program was to create new freely-flowering Kalanchoe cultivars with compact plant habit and attractive foliage and flower coloration. The new Kalanchoe originated from a cross-pollination made by the Inventor in 2002 in Aalsmeer, The Netherlands, of a proprietary selection of Kalanchoe blossfeldiana identified as code number 99A-6523, not patented, as the female, or seed, parent with a proprietary selection of Kalanchoe blossfeldiana identified as code number 99A-8144, not patented, as the male, or pollen, parent. The new Kalanchoe was discovered and selected by the Inventor as a single flowering plant within the progeny of the stated cross-pollination in a controlled environment in Aalsmeer, The Netherlands in 2003. Asexual reproduction of the new Kalanchoe by terminal cuttings in a controlled environment in Aalsmeer, The Netherlands since 2003, has shown that the unique features of this new Kalanchoe are stable and reproduced true to type in successive
