We're still working with Apple to ensure the best experience for Adobe Photoshop. The Photos app continues to be an option for both Mac and iPad owners, and you can view and work on photos in the Photos app from your second display as well as the Mac or iPad. To address new business needs, Adobe is introducing a new multi-user mode for Photoshop. You can now choose to have a single shared set of edits for all users or require individual users to keep their own changes. You can also create and save your own version-controlled edits to share with others. Adobe is proud to support the pro-quality RAW files generated by the latest digital cameras with native support for both RAW recording and workflow in Photoshop. The updated Camera Raw workflow lends itself to better print workflow as a digital matte applies to bring shadows and highlights into register for greater resolution. You can also create perfect JPEG, RGB space or grayscale output from a RAW image. In addition to being able to look at thousands of Stock photos to choose from for your projects, you can now upload your own photographs to the Stock Photo library. You can then search the library to find photos you want to use, and then make them available to use in your projects. Have you heard? You can now add captions to your images which can be located on a layer below the photo. A title block can also be rotated and scaled to the size you'd like.

With Photoshop, 'moving water', 'moving clouds' and 'tractor' are all stages in the creative pipeline. Make your own and take them anywhere.
