03/23/2015 at 6:03 pm peter schiff was one of the first true comic movie stars-the guy you'd see in the ads for a new cape comic book-and i'd argue that schiff was the best of them all. in 1973, schiff joined forces with steve madden to star in an unprecedented action comedy, titled "never met a gentle man. " while schiff and madden's movie is now considered a classic, it's been hard to get a grasp on just how groundbreaking "never met a gentle man" was, as it's a forgotten rarity today. in fact, "never met a gentle man" is one of only three (and possibly the only) action comedy in history to be rated, approved, and certified "R" by the movie ratings board. the movie is set in the united states-a safe, suburban territory-but it's an all-out lawless, cutthroat city of the future. schiff and madden play a pair of self-destructive ex-partners who are thrown in jail after wreaking havoc on a huge government experiment. once inside, the two ex-lovers attempt to break out of prison, which they do only to find themselves in a war with an enemy bent on kidnapping them and using them as hostages. to gain their freedom, schiff and madden recruit a team of ruthless criminals-led by a japanese yakuza leader (hiroshi yamamoto)-and prepare for a highly lucrative real estate scam. to help out, schiff's mom (cheech marin) shows up as well. schiff and madden's wacky exploits set off a series of nail-biting, jaw-dropping scenes that could have easily been ripped from today's r-rated action movies. the fight scenes here are to-die-for, and the stunts are the best we've ever seen. of course, schiff and madden are great, and there's plenty of goofy humor to go around-they were two of the most hilarious actors working at the time. schiff and madden's film is considered a landmark in film history, but now we've lost a true cinematic legend. hey, i think it's about time to start a "never met a gentle man" thread, right? i just realized that i only have one other copy of this movie. so i'd like to share it, and i'd love to hear what you guys think
