Use the keyboard with "hotkeys" Keymacro is an advanced keyboard utility, with a twist. • You can use keymacro to make your keyboard act like a gamepad, a mouse, a laser pointer, etc. You can change the way a single key maps to another function. • You can even change how a key behaves when you hold it down. This is called macro recording. • For instance, you can make the key behave as if it was a joystick controller. Keymacro is easy to use and create macros for any key on your keyboard. Start by binding a key on your keyboard to a macro function. Then create a new macro to repeat the same function or create a different function. Macros can be made to behave as you want, including saving and loading macros on reboot. It's so easy that it's silly. Keymacro: • Bind a key on your keyboard to a macro function. • Create a new macro and assign it to the key you'd like to use. • Go to the "macro settings" tab. • Select the "macro" tab to modify your macro. • Select "play", then choose from different input actions like gamepad, joystick or arrow keys. • Save the macro. • Play the macro when you're pressing the key. • Select "quit" and it's done. Optional: • You can adjust the size of the window for easier viewing. • You can change the "macro behavior" for "Repeat" or "Menu". • You can change the "repeat delay" and "repeat rate" for the repeat macro. • You can change the "repeat delay" and "repeat rate" for the menu macro. • You can also create a non-repeating keyboard macro for a gamepad or joystick. • You can save macros for specific games or keys so you can access them at any time. Flexibility: • You can make keymacro map a key to any macro and any function you want. • You can use keymacro to play your own custom game. • You can record any function you want, even "all keyboard". • When you press the key and release, it will record the 2edc1e01e8

You are greeted by a minimalist interface, which might give the impression that it lacks features. At first glance you may think that this tool is just a simple instant messenger, but you might be surprised to find out that it supports extra features, such as photo selection for albums or the ability to send videos and documents. Express yourself with more than just words The application boasts a rich roster of emojis that allow you to add color to your chat windows. They come in two sizes: the typical small emojis that you are used to creating via keyboard, and the larger, more detailed emojis. Also worth noting is that each message can be bookmarked with a star for faster future reference, which can be seen from the "Starred messages" tab. Some types of attachments that you may send are photos, documents, and videos. It is worth mentioning that during our testing on Windows 10 x64, the option of sending video files did not seem to function properly, since this was only possible through the "send document" option. Furthermore, when sending URLs from popular video sites such as YouTube or Metacafe, neither sender or receiver could preview the video from the chat window which, considering that it's a feature many other popular instant messengers have, is a real drawback. Customize the application with various settings From the settings menu you have many chat and app customization options such as the ability to toggle notifications for specific people, search within your conversation or clear the chat history. You may also change account details, such as phone number or e-mail address from the instant messenger, removing the need to go to your VK profile within the browser to modify your credentials. From the VK Messenger settings menu you can modify several parameters, such as the option to customize the appearance of your chat window. A well-balanced instant messenger VK Messenger is a simple-to-use, visually appealing and feature-rich application, great for when you want to socialize with your friends and family in a quick and convenient way.
