Intra-articular effects of IL-1 and IL-6 in murine posttraumatic osteoarthritis. To investigate the effects of locally applied interleukin (IL)-1 and IL-6 on the progression of posttraumatic osteoarthritis (OA) in mice. An osteochondral lesion of the medial femoral condyle was created in the right knee of C57BL/6 mice. In the IL-1 group, 4 microg of IL-1 was injected into the lesion 3 days before euthanasia, and in the IL-6 group, 4 microg of IL-6 was injected in the same way. In the control group, the lesion was not injected. At 8 weeks after surgery, mice were euthanized, and samples were collected for histological and immunohistochemical analyses. Cartilage lesions were histologically graded on a scale of 0 to 8. The magnitude of loss of glycosaminoglycan (GAG) and the number of proliferating chondrocytes was measured. Gene expression of IL-1 and tumor necrosis factor (TNF)-alpha and -beta in the cartilage and synovium was also analyzed. The IL-1 group showed a higher progression grade and more severe degradation of the cartilage lesions compared to the control group ($P < 0.05$). The IL-6 group tended to show a lower progression grade than the control group, but it was not significantly different. The IL-1 group had significantly less GAG content and more proliferating chondrocytes than the control and IL-6 groups ($P < 0.05$). Gene expression of IL-1 and IL-6 was detected at the cartilage and synovial levels in the IL-1 group, but not in the control and IL-6 groups. The results indicate that locally applied IL-1 and IL-6
