The Share for Review interface lets you work together on a creative project or in a team. You can see what your colleagues are working on, and together you can collaborate in the most natural way possible, from inside Photoshop. You can navigate through sets, layer trees, selections, or even create your own layers with the new droplets. To start this collaborative work, simply share a project. Once you've created a project with Photoshop, you can invite others to collaborate by sharing a link to the project via email. In addition to the beta Share for Review interface, we're also announcing two other features that make it easier to work across platforms and applications. We've made a number of significant enhancements to the web application that run smoothly on both desktop and mobile. For the web app, you can now load a session, and all changes from that session will be saved. This is a big step forward, because with Share for Review, you can use Photoshop to work on a photo on your mobile phone, and your web browser to add text, paint and do other edits. But after you close the browser session, your changes are completely lost. Now, as you edit your project on your mobile phone, loading a new web app session allows you to keep all your new files, and you can reopen them in the web app. Your edits will still be there.
