We report an atom-resolved experimental study of the structure of a zinc-water cluster, $Zn(H_2O)_6_2$ (1). The X-ray diffraction data reveal that the cluster crystallizes in a monoclinic structure of $P2(1)/c$ symmetry with Zn(II) ions in an octahedral environment, surrounded by an average of 6.1 water molecules. A series of ab initio calculations for 1 have been performed by using the MP4(SDTQ) model. From the obtained structural parameters we conclude that the water molecules are equidistant from the Zn atoms with a mean distance of 2.38 ± 0.01 Å. The relative positions of the two terminal hydroxyl groups of the first hydration
