By using the smart photo browser, I can free myself from having to locate my photos, and then open the file in Photoshop Elements. My pictures go to the smart photo browser, and I can customize what I want to do with the image. This also allows me to save myself time in my workflow. I can select photos for batch processing, which can be done on smaller images. I'm very particular about trimming out my borders while converting photos to the web, and this tool saves me a lot of time. I'm not a member of the Adobe stock, but I use the photo service because I save my photos in both their original size and at smaller sizes for web use. I don't feel like I'm missing out on anything by using the stock photography. I'm planning to get into wedding photography, and I'm already preparing for a wedding by getting the wedding pictures saved and organized. I'm also very particular about when I want to upload the wedding images. I can upload the images to my own photo sharing website, which only allows me to tag and access the photos. I can take advantage of the same tools I use to organize and customize images for uploading to my favorite photo sharing website.
