Bajrangi Bhaijaan is not just a film, but a phenomenon that touched the hearts of millions of people across the world. The film showcases the power of love and humanity that transcends borders and religions. The film also highlights the plight of the people living in the disputed Kashmir region, where violence and terrorism are rampant. The film's soundtrack was composed by Pritam and features songs sung by various artists, including Adnan Sami, Mika Singh, Atif Aslam and Rahat Fateh Ali Khan. The songs are a mix of genres, ranging from folk to rock to qawwali. The most popular song from the film is "Selfie Le Le Re", which became a viral hit and inspired many people to take selfies with Salman Khan's signature pose. Bajrangi Bhaijaan is a film that will make you laugh, cry and cheer for the protagonists. It is a film that celebrates the spirit of humanity and brotherhood. It is a film that you should not miss. One of the most memorable scenes from the film is when Bajrangi (Salman Khan) and Munni (Harshaali Malhotra) meet Chand Nawab (Nawazuddin Siddiqui), a Pakistani journalist who agrees to help them reach Munni's village. Chand Nawab is based on a real-life reporter who became famous for his hilarious video report that was interrupted by a train. The film pays tribute to him by recreating the same scene with Nawazuddin Siddiqui. Another scene that touched the viewers was when Bajrangi and Munni cross the border into Pakistan with the help of a group of devotees who were singing "Bhar Do Jholi Meri", a traditional qawwali song. The song was sung by Adnan Sami, who is a Pakistani singer who has also acquired Indian citizenship. The song expresses the longing and devotion of the singer to God, and also symbolizes the bond between Bajrangi and Munni. The film ends with a tear-jerking climax, where Bajrangi is arrested by the Pakistani authorities for illegally entering the country. He is taken to the Wagah border, where he is about to be handed over to the Indian officials. However, Munni runs towards him and calls him "Mama", revealing that she can speak. She also recognizes her mother in the crowd and reunites with her family. Bajrangi is hailed as a hero by both the Indians and the Pakistanis, who chant his name and salute him.
