

Can I Buy One Share Of Stock [REPACK]

Absolutely! The recipient becomes a real shareholder of the company entitled to anything a shareholder gets, like annual reports, declared dividends, invites to shareholder meetings, voting proxies, etc. That's what makes this gift so unique! We ship out the 1st part in two business days or less and this is what is normally given as the gift. Then we start the legal stock registration process which can take 3-7 weeks. When registration is complete, the ownership document is sent directly to the shareholder because the gift has normally been given at that time. All corporate logos and prices are for illustrative purposes only and are not a recommendation, an offer to sell, or a solicitation of an offer to buy any security. Share prices will vary based on market conditions. Share % is of one share truncated to one decimal point. Let's say you want to invest in a company, but its stock price may be higher than what you want to pay. Instead of buying a whole share of stock, you can buy a fractional share, which is a "slice" of stock that represents a partial share, for as little as \$5. For example, if a company's stock is selling at \$1,000 a share and you were buying \$200 worth of it, you would own 0.2 (20%) of a share. With stock slices, investing has never been more accessible. Anytime you buy fractional shares through Schwab Stock Slices, you can buy a single slice or up to 30 slices for as little as \$5 per slice. And of course, you can trade stock slices commission-free online, just as you would full shares at Schwab.¹ See a list of companies in the S&P 500 Index. Schwab Stock Slices is an easy way to buy fractional shares (or whole shares) for a set dollar amount. You have the option to buy slices of stock in up to 30 top U.S. companies in a single transaction. The shares you purchase through Schwab Stock Slices can be held and sold independently. A fractional share (stock slice) is when you own less than one whole share of a company. Fractional shares allow you to invest in stocks based on a dollar amount, so you may end up with a fraction of a share, a whole share, or more than one share. Voting: If you own less than one whole share of stock, you will generally be able to participate in mandatory corporate actions such as stock splits, mergers, or spin-offs, but you will not be able to participate in any shareholder vote or voluntary corporate actions like tender offers and certain rights offerings. Transferability: If you want to transfer your account or specific share positions to another broker, only whole shares can be transferred. Your fractional shares that cannot be transferred or reorganized will be liquidated at prevailing market prices, and the proceeds will be credited to your account. Since your fractional shares cannot be transferred, your overall SIPC coverage may be affected. Corporate Action: If you receive fractional shares as the result of a stock split or other corporate action, we may either sell the shares on the open market or to the issuer or transfer agent, and you are entitled to receive your pro rata portion of the proceeds of such sale. If sold on the open market, the sale price may differ from that offered to certain registered owners by the issuer or transfer agent. The shares available for purchase through Schwab Stock Slices are those in the S&P 500 Index (S&P 500), which includes the 500 leading large-cap U.S. publicly traded companies. The S&P 500 is often used as a benchmark or indicator of how large-cap U.S. equities are performing. See a list of companies in the S&P 500 Index. Multiply your current fractions by the whole number shares of the stock split to see what your future whole or fractional share holdings will be, upon completion of the stock split. For example, if you owned .15 of a share and the company announced a split of three additional shares, you could anticipate holding .45 (0.15×3) of a share when the stock split is complete. If you held .43 shares of the same company, at the completion of the stock split you'd have 1.72 shares. This equates to a whole share and a fractional share because the split would award you an additional 1.29 shares ($.43 \times 3$) shares. Schwab Stock Slices is not intended to be investment advice or a recommendation of any share available for purchase through Stock Slices. Investing in shares can be volatile and involves risk, including loss of principal. Consider your individual circumstances prior to investing. Thanks to online trading, there's no major reason to stop you from buying a single share of stock. And buying just one share isn't just for beginning investors, either. With stocks like online travel site Priceline.com trading for nearly \$1,300 a share, just one share is a decent-sized investment. And don't forget Berkshire Hathaway's Class A shares, which are trading for more than \$180,000 apiece. There's no barrier from buying just one share. Online brokers don't apply surcharges or other financial penalties if you don't buy a round lot of 100 shares. But there are costs to consider, especially for those investing relatively small amounts of money. For instance, most online brokers charge about \$10 to place a trade. That's the commission whether one share or 100 shares are bought. The problem is a \$10 commission is a big bite if an investor is just buying one share of Disney, for instance, for \$80 a share. Investors looking to buy just a single stock should consider a broker like Loyal3, which offers \$0 commission on a variety of popular stocks. Another option would be to take advantage of free commission offers at brokerages like TD Ameritrade and Charles Schwab on exchange-traded funds. Investors can buy a single share of an ETF, get diversified, and pay no commission. Within the My Accounts tab, navigate to Buy & Sell. On the Buy & Sell landing page, choosing the option to Trade ETFs & stocks sends you to the trade order form. All buy orders will execute using your selected account's funds available to trade. The Home Depot Direct Stock Purchase Plan (DSPP) enables you to invest a minimum amount in Home Depot stock and build your stock ownership over time. It's designed for individual investors who might otherwise avoid making small, long-term stock purchases because of large minimum brokerage fees. You always have control of your shares. You may withdraw your DSPP holdings of Home Depot stock at any time, or may ask the program administrator to sell your shares. Purchasing Stock If you do not already own Home Depot stock, or if your stock is held through a brokerage account, you may use the plan to buy your first shares directly from the Company. The minimum initial investment is \$500. For ongoing investment through DSPP, you may buy stock by having a minimum of \$50 automatically deducted from your checking account or savings account each month, or you may pay by check as often as once a week. Transaction Fees For each transaction, a small service charge is deducted from your investment plus the pro rata amount of brokerage commissions (generally 5 cents per share for purchases and 15 cents per share for sales). Service charges are: Features at No Charge Through DSPP, you receive a stock safekeeping service and the ability to make transfers or gifts of Company stock - all at no charge. The recipient of the transfer or gift will have an account opened in their name and will enjoy full program benefits. Your online brokerage of choice might also ask if you want to open a margin account. With a margin account, the brokerage lends you money to buy stock. This lets experienced investors buy more shares of stock with less of their own money in exchange for some additional costs and much more risk. Direct purchase plans are almost always administered by third parties, rather than the companies themselves. The two most common direct purchase plan administrators are ComputerShare and American Stock Transfer & Trust Company (AST). Both firms charge additional fees for direct purchase plans. In contrast, most online brokers charge zero commissions to buy and sell shares of stock. Full-service brokers provide well-heeled clients with a broad variety of financial services, from retirement planning and tax preparation to estate planning. They also can help you buy stocks. The trouble is full-service brokers charge steep commissions compared to online brokers. For wealthy individuals without a lot of extra time to stay on top of their complicated financial lives, full-service brokers offer special treatment as well as a high level of trust. If all you want to do is buy stocks, a direct purchase plan or an online brokerage is a better choice. There are thousands of different publicly traded companies offering shares of stock on the market. That makes it daunting to decide which stocks to buy. One way to think about researching the stocks you want to buy is to adopt a well-thought out strategy, like buying growth stocks or buying a portfolio of dividend stocks. Whichever strategy you choose, finding the stocks you want to buy can still be challenging. Stock screeners help you narrow down your list of potential stocks to buy and offer an endless range of filters to screen out all the companies that do not meet your parameters. Nearly all online brokerage accounts offer stock screeners, and there are more than a few free versions available online.
