Saving 80,000 Gold in Another World for My Retirement follows a girl named Mitsuha who accidentally falls into a medieval-esque fantasy world. Unlike many isekai stories with a similar premise, Mitsuha is uniquely able to travel between that world and her own. She begins to take advantage of her ability, planning an early retirement, which she thinks she will need 80,000 gold to be able to achieve. The story is about the various ways that she earns that gold. The teaser for Saving 80,000 Gold in Another World for My Retirement gives us our first real look at the upcoming anime. It shows Mitsuha switching back and forth between both worlds, and gives a preview of some of the jobs that she is doing as well as her intense math calculations to come up with the 80,000 gold sum. The trailer is light-hearted and fun, and Mitsuha is not your average teenage boy isekai protagonist which helps the anime stand out from others in the genre. With the anime world so saturated in isekai anime, it's challenging to make something that people will really remember for more than a season. Saving 80,000 Gold in Another World for My Retirement already has its long but memorable name on it's side at least, and that name lets otaku know exactly what kind of plot they are signing up for when they start watching. The light novel and manga have been well-recieved too, but it will take something truly special for Saving 80,000 Gold in Another World for My Retirement to really make an impact.
